Incomplete Acquisition in Bilingualism: Re-examining the Age Factor (Studies in Bilingualism, Volume 39) Silvina A. Montrul. Age effects have played a particularly prominent role in some theoretical perspectives on second language acquisition. This book takes an entirely new perspective on this issue by re-examining these theories in light of the existence of apparently similar non-native outcomes in adult heritage speakers who, unlike adult second language learners, acquired two or more ...

Dr. Silvina Montrul | Linguistics at Illinois
Language attrition is the process of losing a native or first, language. This process is generally caused by both isolation from speakers of the first language and the acquisition and use of a second language, which interferes with the correct production and comprehension of the first. Such interference from a second language is likely experienced to some extent by all bilinguals, but is most evident among speakers for whom a language other than their first has started to play an important, if n

Language attrition - Wikipedia
Any reasonable definition of the word incomplete not only entails the possibility of completion (so the input should provide the cues), but logically by extension, that acquisition at some point did not obtain. So, if some property was indeed acquired and then eroded, irrespective of what the variables are to explain the loss, then the property in question was in fact completely acquired at some point of development.
