What is an 'ablation'
Ablation (sounds like ah-blai-shun) is a medical procedure used to correct certain heart rhythm problems, such as atrial flutter. It restores the normal regular rhythm of the heart by scarring the tissue in the heart that triggers the abnormal rhythm. This allows the heart to return to normal regular rhythm.

~~Atrial Flutter Ablation— Summary and Review ...~~

Atrial pacing techniques to interrupt or suppress atrial flutter have evolved. Catheter ablation techniques either to cure atrial flutter or to control the ventricular response rate have been developed, and related surgical treatments are available. Even automatic low energy cardioversion of atrial flutter to sinus rhythm has been developed.

Ablation success is lower than in typical flutter and the recurrence rate is higher, especially in circuits located in the paraseptal areas. 24,132–134 On the other hand, CTI-dependent flutter is a frequent finding in patients with atrial tachycardia and surgical or ablation scars. 24 In cases with multiple MRT circuits, CTI ablation may make ablation success easier by stabilising the atypical MRT circuit and thus making mapping and ablation possible. In cases of atypical MRT of the RA

~~Atrial Flutter, Typical and
Atypical: A Review~~

Ablation Treatment of atrial fibrillation or atrial flutter is designed to control the rate at which the ventricles contract, to restore the normal rhythm of the heart, and to treat the disorder causing the arrhythmia. Drugs to prevent the formation of blood clots and emboli (anticoagulants or aspirin) are usually given.

Atrial flutter arises from the right atrium. In 90% of the cases, it is an anti-clockwise circuit, and in 10% of the cases, a clockwise circuit in the right atrium. A single ablation line is created between the inferior vena cava and the tricuspid valve (cavo-tricuspid isthmus ablation) to interrupt the flutter circuit.
