Catholicism, like Christianity regards the Holy Bible, a collection of canonical books in two parts (the Old Testament and the New Testament) as authoritative: written by human authors under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, and therefore the inerrant word of God. So in a way both follow the Bible as their central scripture, however there are nine books that are left out from modern Christian translations.

Roman Catholicism - Roman Catholicism - Beliefs and practices: The idea of faith shared by all Christian churches is rooted in the New Testament. But the New Testament idea of faith is not simple; indeed, it possesses a breadth of meaning that has led to varying understandings, even within a single Christian communion. Most modern interpreters of the New Testament would agree to a description ...

Roman Catholicism - Beliefs and practices | Britannica

Roman Catholics maintain that the papacy holds the highest authority in the Christian faith and that the pope is the divinely appointed head. On the other hand, Lutherans assert that Christ is the only true head of Christendom and that all Christian doctrine must be judged by Christ ' s body and the Scripture.
