Cyril the Squirrel 📖 Head Gardener and Nut Gatherer November 7, 2013 by mojimoidesign 18 Comments I absolutely love this time of year, the reds and russets of the trees, the cozy dark evenings, the thin, fresh autumn sunshine (if we're lucky!). So, in honor of all things autumnal, I have created this design for a squirrel named Cyril.

Cyril is so courageous that when the peanuts run out, he climbs up your legs, sits on your lap, stands on his back legs with his front paws on your chest and stares into your eyes to make sure you are not lying when you tell him that there are no peanuts left.

Tom Stephenson: Cyril the Squirrel

Meet Cyril. He is eating one of the many grapes we brought to the park to feed him and his mates. Needless to say, Cyril had the lion's share, the fat bastard. I know from childhood experience that squirrels go mad for grapes.

Tom Stephenson: Cyril the Squirrel 2

Poor Cyril Squirrel : This grey squirrel appeared in the garden this afternoon looking in a terrible state, it was saturated, limping and eating very gingerly poor thing. I can only guess that it either fell from the tree or more likely it has been clipped by a car and ended up getting badly bruised and drenched in the process as it has rained heavily today.
