DISENCHANTMENT, RATIONALITY AND THE MODERNITY OF MAX WEBER

Disenchantment, rationality and the modernity of Max Weber. Following Aristotle's distinction between theoretical and practical rationality, Max Weber holds that beliefs about the world and actions within the world must follow procedures consistently and be appropriately formed if they are to count as rational. Here, I argue that Weber's account of theoretical and practical rationality, as disclosed through his conception of the disenchantment of the world, displays a confessional ...

Disenchantment | philosophy and sociology | Britannica

What Weber's diagnosis of modernity shows us is that even rationality has seeds of irrationality in it – and that truly, we cannot have one without the other. The greater the rationality of the social structure and organization of a society, the greater the irrationality, which exists underneath the surface and grows and festers.

In sociology, rationalization (or rationalisation) is the replacement of traditions, values, and emotions as motivators for behavior in society with concepts based on rationality and reason. For example, the implementation of bureaucracies in government is a kind of rationalization, as is the construction of high-efficiency living spaces in architecture and urban planning.

Rationalization (sociology) - Wikipedia

In social science, disenchantment (German: Entzauberung) is the cultural rationalization and devaluation of religion apparent in modern society. The term was borrowed from Friedrich Schiller by Max Weber to describe the character of modernized, bureaucratic, secularized Western society.

Disenchantment - Wikipedia

Modernity, disenchantment, and secularization, not only all intertwine and play a role in today's changing society, but the first one acts as cause for the other two, through ideas such as the Secularization Thesis and secularism arising as part of the disenchanted world. Before explaining how, it is important to first discuss what modernity is.
