In \"The Sisters,\" and in the rest of the stories in Dubliners, strange and puzzling events occur that remain unexplained. Father Flynn suffers from paralyzing strokes and eventually dies, but his deterioration, epitomized by his laughing frenzy in a confessional box, also hints that he was mentally unstable.

Dubliners: The Sisters | SparkNotes

Summary. It is 1895 in Dublin, Ireland when an unnamed boy comes down to supper one evening. Family friend Old Cotter is telling the boy's aunt and uncle that the boy's mentor, Father James Flynn, has passed away after a third stroke. The two men share the opinion that spending time with Father Flynn was unhealthy for the boy, who should have been playing \"with young lads of his own age.\"

The Sisters - CliffsNotes

By Dr Oliver Tearle. 'The Sisters' is the opening story in James Joyce's 1914 collection, Dubliners. Unlike the other stories in the collection, it is told in the first person, by a young man recalling his friendship, as a boy, with a Catholic priest. As this very brief summary of the story would suggest, there is something odd in the story being given the title 'The Sisters', since the two sisters are actually not the central focus of the story.

The innocence of youth is tainted early in Dubliners, as death and Father Flynn's deathly influence permeate "The Sisters," looming behind both reader and narrator like an ominous shade. The child narrator may very well be a reflection of the reader, mirroring the thought processes that lead to a simultaneous realization of death's paralyzing nature in the world of Dubliners.
