It was further argued that as the World was created in six days, so it would last six thousand years, the seventh thousand would be a period of repose, a sabbath on Earth to be followed by the destruction of the World (Neander 1858, 248). The necessary implications of the premillennial doctrine are grave indeed.

His most recent Ignatius Press book is Flowers of Heaven: One Thousand Years of Christian Verse. Pearce compiled the poetry and wrote short introductions to each of the poets. Carl E. Olson, editor of IgnatiusInsight.com, interviewed Pearce about the book, poets, and the past and present state of poetry.

The Power of Poetry | Interview with Joseph Pearce ...

They grow dim in the light of ages. Few of our great cities in this country are a hundred years old as yet. For nearly a thousand years this city prospered; yet it fell. I do not think that it is wrong for us to think and talk about heaven. I like to locate heaven, and find out all I can about it. I expect to live there through all eternity.

Heaven: Its Hope. A Sermon by Dwight L Moody.

He has no one to tempt. The redeemed will be in heaven with Christ, until the end of the thousand years (Revelation 20:4). During that time, the saints will be given a chance to look at the judgment of the wicked to see God's justice just before He destroys the wicked (Revelation 20:4). Then, the redeemed will descend with Jesus and the New Jerusalem to earth. The wicked will be resurrected and will join the devil (Revelation 20:7) to surround and war against the New city. But God's fire ...
