Gender, Space, Architecture. Architecture is a subject which demands to be understood in context: that is, within the context of its production (society, economics, politics, culture) and the context of its consumption, representation and interpretation (different academic disciplines, interest groups, institutions, users). In the light of enormous and rapid shifts in theoretical, historical and critical debates, particularly with respect to feminism, understanding architecture in relation ...

My early work on gender and architecture in this area sought to develop a feminist practice of architectural history, and to draw autobiographical concerns into academic writing, specifically in an essay called '(Un)doing Architecture' from 1998. Key publications include a sole authored book Jane Rendell, The Pursuit of Pleasure: Gender, Space and Architecture in Regency London, (2002) and reader, Gender, Space, Architecture, (1999), co-edited with Iain Borden and Barbara Penner.
