Gender stereotypes for women are formed by unfair beliefs that all men and women are the same. This discrimination leads to certain effects such as how men expect women to do housework, take care of the children, and take on a passive role. Similar gender stereotypes are seen in "A Jury of Her Peers" by Susan Glaspell. In this short story, the murder of Mr. Wright was investigated by a group of men and women in Mr. Wright's home.

Imitation of Life represents race and gender role stereotypes as an answer to the division of these two roles. This film shows a lot of the film's drama between women and the relationship between a mother and daughter. In the film, one can see the stereotypes between the "mammy" and the "tragic mulatto", a mixed-race person, as ...
