Thus, despite its lighthearted title, the Harvard Design School Guide to Shopping (Taschen, 2002) is no merry primer on the world's chic boutiques. Rather, this unusual 800-page book examines all things retail from the architecture of Niketown, Disneyworld, and airport malls to the histories of escalators, air-conditioning, and bar codes and, through essays, interviews, pages of photographs, and statistics, identifies shopping as a defining and unsightly feature of urban society.

Harvard Design School Guide to Shopping is a compendium of 45 essays by 15 participants with the usual killer images and stats (for example, yearly sales at Wal-Mart exceed the GNP of three-quarters of countries in the world; the total area devoted to retail in the world, a third of it in the US, is equal to 33 Manhattans). At once technological and economic, social and cultural, the analysis tracks post-industrial consumption as it transforms the city almost as much as industrial production ...
