True West by Sam Shepard

Last Train To Nibroc

Last Train to Nibroc, the first play of the trilogy, was inspired by Hutton's learning, from a book about S.J. Perelman, that the legendary writers F. Scott Fitzgerald and Nathaniel West, Perelman's brother-in-law, not only died within a day of one another in 1940, but that their corpses may very well have been shipped back for burial to the East Coast on the same train. Said Hutton, "I didn't want to write about bodies, so I put a young man and woman on the train..."
