Cardiff Law School was one of the first Law Schools in the UK to offer a course on Law and Religion for undergraduates. The course is open to all second and final year students who are studying an undergraduate course at the Law School. The course was originally called Comparative Law of Religion and counted for 30 credits towards the law degree. The course is now called Law of Religion and is available as both a 20 credit and 30 credit option.

Indeed, the separation of church and state is deeply rooted in our Constitution. While public schools are not supposed to support one particular religious belief, neither should a school require others to accept religious or anti-religious beliefs. The "Religion at School" section focuses on school prayer and the pledge of allegiance, including the reasons for the constitutional ban, legal challenges, and the "minute of silence" option.

Law and religion is the interdisciplinary study of relationships between law, especially public law, and religion. Vogue Magazine reports that during the late 1900, a new law and religion approach emerged that progressively built its own contribution to religious studies. Over a dozen scholarly organizations and committees were formed by 1983, and a scholarly quarterly, the Journal of Law and Religion, was first published that year. The Ecclesiastical Law Journal began publication in 1987. The R
