GREP (global/regular expression/print) is a way to describe patterns in text. For example, if you want to find a word that starts with a 'D' and ends with a 'G', you can do that with GREP. Particularly useful for long documents such as books, catalogues or newspapers, the power of GREP can be harnessed to deal with the removal of double spaces after full stops or to apply a style to every ...

Even though GREP is a largely automated process, we were still applying the styles one at a time through the Find / Change dialog, and that 's time-consuming. I hinted at a way to automate the process of applying styles using GREP and some of InDesign 's powerful built-in Scripts. This week, I ' ll show you how to do that. But First!

How to Apply GREP Quickly with InDesign Scripts

In a nutshell, GREP in InDesign is a feature that lets you find and change patterns of text instead of a specific text string, as in a regular Find/Change operation. Once a pattern is found, you can use GREP to edit it, such as applying formatting, removing duplicates, replacing some characters, and so on.

One of the biggest advantages to using GREP with Find/Change in InDesign is the ability to manipulate the text you ' ve found. For instance, you could find everything that fit the pattern of a price: `$\d+,*\d+.\d{2}` and then in the Change to field you could tell InDesign to put " Price: " in front of that found text.
