Erosion and Deposition Erosion is the process by which wind, water, ice, or gravity transports weathered materials from one location to another. Deposition occurs when the eroded materials are dropped, or laid down. Erosion and deposition DO NOT destroy matter..... they move and deposit matter in new places.

Weathering, Erosion, and Deposition - NDSS. Moving water changes the shape of the land by breaking down rocks and carrying sediments from one place to another; ocean shorelines are exposed to constant weathering and erosion from moving water and wind. Windblown sediments can shape the land and form sand dunes; glaciers carve the land and carry rocks and sediments from one place to another.

CHAPTER 3 LESSON 1 Erosion and Deposition

What is Erosion? Erosion is a geological process in which natural materials are worn away and transported by environmental features such as wind and water. It is similar to weathering, which is a process that wears down (or 'weathers') rock, but does not result in that dissolved material being transported. Erosion is the opposite of deposition, which leads to the creation of landforms through deposited material.

This specific lesson covers standard 5-ESS2-1 by describing three processes that change the geosphere. The processes of weathering, erosion, and deposition are impacted by factors of the other systems such as water and wind. At the conclusion of the unit, students will be asked to make these connections to create a model of how systems interact.
