Colonial & Post-colonial Criticism: As the name aptly hints, this school of criticism is sharply focused on the study of literary texts (mostly written during the era of European colonial ventures itself) to unfold the confusions, chaos and deprivation brought by the uncalled for, irrational and lustrous invasions of the countries and societies, physically, culturally and consciously. The ...

Different types of literary theories: An Introduction ...

From classical times to now, Criticism never borrowed any idea from other disciplines such as psychology, sociology, political sciences, etc., but literary theory's fundamental pillars are found in other disciplines; for example, feminist reading of a text could not have become possible without sociology.

Relationship Between Literary Theory And Literary Criticism

The act of critically interpreting any literary text with a certain literary theory in mind is called literary criticism and the person involved in this intellectual (rarely emotional) exercise is called a literary critic. The act of literary criticism, in the modern context, has become synonymous (almost) with the idea tossed by I. A. Richards – practical criticism.
