Muscular Christianity : Embodying the Victorian Age

Muscular Christianity is a philosophical movement that originated in England in the mid-19th century, characterized by a belief in patriotic duty, discipline, self-sacrifice, manliness, and the moral and physical beauty of athleticism. The movement came into vogue during the Victorian era as a method of building character in pupils at English public schools. The movement was also closely related to British imperialism, and many tenets of Muscular Christianity were derived from or related to the Muscular Christianity is characterized by an “ association between physical strength, religious certainty, and the ability to shape and control the world around oneself. ” According to Donald Hall, vigorous exercise was thought to help a man withstand “ potential threats to religious belief, bodily health, and social stability ” (8). In this train of thought, physical exercise, mental exertion, and spiritual health are interwoven to create the ideal masculine male. The term “ muscular ...
