One hundred and fifty years post-Huxley, geneticist Svante Paabo explores a new type of human evolution research; Neanderthal Man: In Search of Lost Genomes details Paabo's work with ancient DNA. It's hard to find a hominin species that so completely straddles the boundary between the sciences and the humanities.

Neanderthal Man: In Search of Lost Genomes by Svante Pääbo

Neanderthals are an extinct species or subspecies of archaic humans who lived in Eurasia until about 40,000 years ago. They probably went extinct due to competition with or extermination by immigrating European early modern humans or due to great climatic change, disease, or a combination of these factors. It is unclear when Neanderthals split from Neanderthal behaviour similarly points to fundamental differences. New genetic evidence strongly suggests a single origin for modern humans in Africa. The authors argue that, capable and intelligent as the Neanderthals were, they proved no match for the better-organized, better-equipped newcomers, and died out.
