What everyone should know ...

Person-centred care reflects a general move from a purely medical model to a bio-social approach to health care. Notions of person-centredness are now embedded in the health care policies of all four countries of the UK. Why is it important? Given the current focus on safety and financial targets, some might ask whether person-centred care is a 'nice to have' rather than an essential priority. But there are some very pressing and practical reasons for adopting person-centred care.

Person-centred care | Health Education England

Person-centred care moves away from professionals deciding what is best for a patient or service user, and places the person at the centre, as an expert of their own experience. The person, and their family where appropriate, becomes an equal partner in the planning of their care and support, ensuring it meets their needs, goals, and outcomes.

Introduction to person-centred care for older people in ...

Person-centred care is crucial to providing first class care. By putting the individual at the heart of your service, your care plan and care delivery then reflects that specific person, resulting in a happier and healthier client. So, instead of using a blanket care plan for everyone, the way you look after each person should be unique.
