Sacred Economics: Money, Gift, and Society in the Age of ...

I mentioned that monetary transactions don't create a bond, but gift transactions do. And that's one reason why gifts are sacred, and we understand that a little bit. We make a ritual sometimes out of gift giving. It's a special act, we understand. Primitive societies were all gift economies, if you go back far enough.

Sacred Economics | Charles Eisenstein

Money was inhabited, as it were, by two spirits from the very beginning. It was both an extension of gift economies (which was once nearly all there was) into the realm of mass society and an incursion of measuring, counting, keeping, and controlling into the original openness of gift mentality.
