 The magnitude of primary consolidation settlement of the soil is dependent on the soil conditions and can continue to occur even when the foundation bearing pressure is well below the soils maximum allowable bearing capacity. The bearing capacity of the soil includes a requirement that the soil will not settle by more than 25mm.

 Soil consolidation refers to the mechanical process by which soil changes volume gradually in response to a change in pressure. This happens because soil is a two-phase material, comprising soil grains and pore fluid, usually groundwater. When soil saturated with water is subjected to an increase in pressure, the high volumetric stiffness of water compared to the soil matrix means that the water initially absorbs all the change in pressure without changing volume, creating excess pore water pres
