BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) — A 34-year-old Montana man has been sentenced to 80 years in prison for killing a six-month-old boy he babysat in 2017. Jason Allen Badger had 20 years of that suspended during sentencing Tuesday in District Court in Billings for the deliberate homicide of Christopher Hackerott. Badger was babysitting Hackerott on June 29, 2017, when the infant became inconsolable, the Billings Gazette reported.

Montana is one of the only states whose law allows for employees to have an extra-layer of protection. In other states employers can fire an un-contracted at-will employee at any time and for any legal reason. In Montana work at-will laws only apply during a probation period that is a standard six months unless otherwise established at the time of employment.
