In my first essay, "The Accidental Universe," I discuss the possibility that there may exist multiple universes, multiple space-time continuums, some with more than three dimensions. But even if there is only a single space-time continuum, a single "universe," I would argue that there are many universes within our one universe, some visible and some not.

According to the current thinking of many physicists, we are living in one of a vast number of universes. We are living in an accidental universe. We are living in a universe uncalculable by science. "B ack in the 1970s and 1980s," says Alan Guth, "the feeling was that we were so smart, we almost had everything figured out."
