The Divali Small Book Festival Stories

Divali means an array of lamps (deep: lamp; vali: array). In the early days, the Hindus celebrated this festival in a very small way. They made at least five deyas (small clay pots) per household, filled it with coconut oil or Ghee (clarified butter) and a wick made of wool was placed in it. Now, the lighting of deyas is a spectacular sight. Families, communities, even those who are not Hindu, participate in this enlightening, uplifting occasion.
