Weldon continues to address her Dear Reader with smarty asides concerning the damn foolishness of us mortals—and here, the sorry spectacle of feckless parenting. This is a chronicle of marital pratfalls that result in a resilient kid's horrid adventures in a cold, cold world. ""People like Clifford and Helen love and create havoc in every decade. . . and the children of [such] lovers ...

Jane Hirshfield is one of the best contemporary poets in the genre of Buddhist writing. In The Lives of the Heart, Hirshfield encourages living simply, productively, and creatively in the present. Hirshfield's poems are "simple complexities," exploring common Buddhist themes such as interconnectedness, enlightenment, and impermanence.

Living from the Heart consists of three related pieces that explore living from the spiritual Heart. Part One, From the Heart, offers simple ways to drop your awareness into the Heart and thereby shift into a more open, allowing perspective and to more fully experience the world and your true nature as aware space. It goes on to explore dropping awareness into the belly and ultimately into the larger spiritual Heart, which includes the mind, heart and belly.

Some of the primary heart qualities are unconditional love, care, compassion, connection, kindness, forgiveness, gratitude, patience, acceptance, cooperation and many more we all know, yet they often slip from our awareness when needed the most. We own these heart qualities but it's our job to awaken them and begin to show up as who we are.
