The premise is that Britain sued for peace in WW2 in 1943, and the Germans decide, 7 years later to come back and finish the job. The story cracks along at a good pace with some entertaining narrative, and the author throws in a succession of characters to provide differing narrative perspectives, all interwoven with each other.

The 1950 invasion of Albania was based on this view, and its disastrous failure illustrates the folly of believing one's own propaganda! The preparations for the invasion go back at least to 1944-45, when the British government assisted as many as possible of Albania's collaborators and war criminals to flee the wrath of the Albanian people.

The Battle of Chamdo occurred from 6 through 19 October 1950. It was a military campaign by the People's Republic of China to take the Chamdo Region from a de facto independent Tibetan state after months of failed negotiations on the status of Tibet. The campaign resulted in the capture of Chamdo and further negotiations between the PRC and Tibetan representatives that eventually resulted in the annexation of Tibet by the People's Republic of China.
