Bunkai: The Marriage of Kata and Kumite. Bunkai, "application," is a formal class of karate exercise in which the practitioner studies, with an simulated attacker, the meaning of the individual (and sometimes combined) movements that go together to make up kata. In that sense, we can think of bunkai as the marriage of kata and kumite, as shown in the picture below.

Understanding Kata And Its Relationship To Bunkai. While kata is regarded as the 'art form' of karate, the original premise behind all kata is self-defense. Behind each technique lies multiple hidden self-defense application/s. The application of the techniques within kata is known as 'Bunkai'. Often, when studying or practicing Bunkai, students try to emulate or resemble the kata as close as possible.

Understanding Kata And Its Relationship To Bunkai | GKR Karate

When used in the context of Karate, bunkai symbolizes the whole process of breaking down the movements of a kata to understand how the techniques can be applied in self-defense. In other words, bunkai is the essence of kata. You see, kata was never meant to be used as a standalone solo exercise. That's a modern phenomenon.
